Johnny Carson?

Yep, from the grave Johnny Carson has released a sex tape!

It's reported that the sex tape is with Carson's wife back in the 70's and get this...Johnny is packing plenty of penis! The owner of the tape is currently shopping the footage for the best price. The tape shows Johnny having a little touchy session with himself before some gorgeous gal who is unidentified wonders into the scene for a little oral action which is followed by a 20 minute sex scene. Johnny could go from the King of Late night to the King of Long Pipe!

OK, she has finally reached the true realm of WHOREishness!

To the average everyday person, the photos that Miley Cyrus posted to her Twitter account were just her having fun with a mannequin hand...NOPE! What she has in her crotch is the sex toy The Hands of Adonis which is a specialty toy for those into size or fisting! Again, who really cares what she does in her private time but she's fresh off the Disney farm...is this an appropriate post? Most of her fans are still children!

Damn it we tried not to feature another Kardashian story this month!!!

Let's see last month Khloe Kardashian was at a night club grinding on rapper The Game and this month she donned some Daisy Dukes with stripper boots and made a visit to the Revolt set where she got comfy and cozy with rapper Rick Ross. It's rumored that they are in a relationship. Of course, TEM isn't sure of a date for The Game's next disc but Rick Ross dropped this month...coincidence?

STORY OF THE MONTH

TEM was already aware that there was supposed to be a sex tape with Marilyn Monroe and JFK...that will never see the light of day!

But now the UK's The Mirror reports that there is a tape that involves a threesome with Monroe, JFK and his brother Robert.

The owner, William Castleberry is set to auction the tape which he says he held on to all these years out of respect for Joe DiMaggio.

IN THEATRES NOW

The Other Woman

After discovering her boyfriend is married, a woman (Cameron Diaz) tries to get her ruined life back on track. But when she accidentally meets the wife he's been cheating on (Leslie Mann), she realizes they have much in common, and her sworn enemy becomes her greatest friend.

Haunt

A family of five moves into a beautiful, sprawling dream home. One problem: it's cursed. The family's moody 18-year-old son and his mysterious new neighbor inadvertently awaken something in the house while also violently shaking the many skeletons in the many closets.

Repentance

Thomas Carter (Anthony Mackie) has reinvented himself as a therapist/ spiritual advisor who advocates a synthesis of world religions and positivity. When Carter takes on Sanchez (Forest Whitaker) as a personal client in an effort to raise funds for his indebted brother Ben (Mike Epps), things quickly take a turn for the worse.

The Family

Mafia boss Giovanni Manzoni (Robert De Niro), who has somehow offended Don Luchese, a rival mafia boss, survives an attempted hit on him and his family at a barbecue.

After he snitches on Luchese (sending him to prison, where his influence allows him to live well), Manzoni and his family enter an FBI witness protection program under the supervision of Agent Robert Stansfield (Tommy Lee Jones). After the family's criminal activities alert the kingpin to their new location, they are relocated to a small town in Normandy, France.

This is not a comedy but an extremely entertaining film. Every character has their own way or portraying their connection to the Mob. A great film!

Available on DVD and RedBox

The Haunting of Helena

The film follows young Helena and her mother as they move into a new apartment after a divorce. When Helena loses a tooth, evil ensues. The film is more suspense than horror but entertaining.

Paranormal Whacktivity

I turned this movie off 4 minutes into it.

It's that bad...SKIP IT!!!

Album of the Month

I'm not sure if Pharrell has finally mastered auto-tune or his vocals are just getting stronger. On his latest offering GIRL, he seems a lot more confident in his range and it comes off fairly well. On the first track Marilyn Monroe, it's actually his vocals on the hook that give this relatively lame track life. I think he should have gone more club classic with Brand New, his duet with Justin Timberlake and on this track Justin steals the show conjuring up the spirit of Michael Jackson in some spots. Tracks to Look out for - Happy, Gush, Come get it Bae and It Girl.

DARRELL ISSA

I Google searched Darrell Issa and without paying any attention, I clicked on the first search result.

From the beginning, on the home page, I found a very disturbing press release...

March 13, 2014

Washington, D.C. – By a vote of 233-181, the House of Representatives today approved the Executive Needs to Faithfully Observe and Respect Congressional Enactments of the Law (ENFORCE the Law) Act (H.R. 4138), a carefully crafted bill to rein in the growing problem of executive overreach and restore balance to the separation of powers enshrined in our Constitution.

The ENFORCE the Law Act, introduced by Representatives Trey Gowdy (R-S.C.), Darrell Issa (R-Calif.), House Judiciary Committee Chairman Bob Goodlatte (R-Va.), and Representative Jim Gerlach (R-Pa.), puts a procedure in place to permit the House, or the Senate, to authorize a lawsuit against the Executive Branch for failure to faithfully execute the laws.

Yes, you read it right. Congress passed a bill that would allow them to file a lawsuit against the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The reason?

According to Darrell Issa - "President Obama has established a disturbing pattern of cherry picking the laws he wishes to enforce. The House acted decisively today, to bring accountability back to the Oval Office by allowing Congress to authorize lawsuits against the Executive Branch when they fail to uphold our nation's laws. The Constitution charges the President with the responsibility to faithfully execute all the laws and not just the ones he supports. The Executive Branch has grown so bloated and convoluted that it now comfortably abuses its power knowing that the complexity of its actions and judicial procedure will effectively allow it to circumvent the other two branches of our government. We must restore a working system of checks and balances that ensures the government's actions are judged on constitutional merits rather than bypassed or delayed based on the political whims of the President and his appointees. This legislation provides the simple expedited procedure that lawmakers and the American people need to hold their federal government accountable."

How has President Obama abused the power given to our executive branch?

The Heritage Foundation - a republican think tank - list Obama's appointment of Richard Cordray to serve as the director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau as one example. They claim that since this appointment was done during a time when Congress was still in session because the House never consented, this broke with over 100 years of precedent.

The Justice department has a totally different take on what happened. In a 23 page legal opinion, the Justice department summarizes the legal advice given to the White House BEFORE President Obama took action.

Assistant Attorney General Virginia Seitz wrote that the president has authority to make such appointments because the Senate is on a 20-day recess, even though it has held periodic pro forma sessions in which no business is conducted. Seitz argued the pro forma sessions – some with as few as one member present – have not been sufficient for the chamber to exercise its constitutional authority to advise and consent to normal presidential nominations.

Her new memo cites a Justice Department legal opinion from President George W. Bush's Republican administration in justifying Obama's recent appointments. The Bush administration opinion from 2004 says that a recess during a session of the Senate can meet constitutional requirements for permitting the president to make recess appointments as long as the recess is of sufficient length. Seitz noted that the last five presidents have made recess appointments during recesses of 14 days or less.

I'm sure that the 228 republicans and 5 democrats that voted for this bill had to have known that no precedent had been broken and that the entire process was a legislative waste of time.

Any Committee on Oversight and Government Chairman that was worth a damn would have shied away from that BS - but then there's Darrell Issa.

Issa has investigated everything from the health care act to the IRS. If it's something that might give the Obama administration a black eye then Darrell Issa is trying to get to the bottom of it.

Some would say that he's just doing his job and so it would seem. It wasn't until yet ANOTHER IRS hearing where Issa abruptly stopped ranking member Elijah Cummings from doing his job that it became crystal clear that Issa is more interested in conducting a dog and pony show than investigating.

After IRS official Lois Lerner refused to answer the committee's questions for the second time by invoking her 5th amendment rights, Chairman Issa shut the hearing down, excused the witness and turned off ranking members Elijah Cumming's microphone in the middle of his statement...then Issa walked out.

His actions led to the House Democrats submitting a formal resolution for a vote of condemnation. The resolution was defeated after Issa issued an apology to Cummings but then went on Fox News with his chest puffed out showing absolutely no remorse for his actions.

Darrell Issa should not be condemned because of what he did to Cummings. It's his criminal background that should get him removed altogether.

- Issa has been arrested for grand theft auto after stealing a Maserati from a showroom. That case was dismissed.
- Issa paid a fine and was sentenced to six months probation for possession of an unregistered gun after an Ohio police officer pulled him over and found a .25 caliber pistol, 44 rounds of ammo and a tear gas gun.
- The least investigated incident occurred after one of Issa's car alarm factories blew up. This was after Issa removed all of the important files and quadrupled his insurance on the property.

This is the guy that was appointed to investigate the government - What a joke!

And we are the one's paying for this comedy with our tax dollars...so the joke is on the American people! Where, for God's sake, is the outrage?

Let's see, we have phones that not only make phone calls but search the web, play all of your favorite videos, music, television programs, games and take pictures.

We have televisions that we can talk to, video game consoles that double as a top of the line Blu-Ray disc players and computers.

There's a watch that takes calls and glasses that will record your life as you wonder through this wonderful world of ours.

All that's missing is a smart gun!

Wait...nope, got it!

Germany company Armatix seems to be the first in line when it comes to "smart" guns, introducing a firearm that is linked to a watch by an RFID (radio frequency identification) chip.

In order to be discharged the gun must be near the watch.

Get this...the watch is waterproof and ALSO KEEPS TIME!

Ahh...I remember the days when just having a waterproof watch was all the craze. The pistol has a green light that indicates the status of the gun...no green light and the firearm is useless.

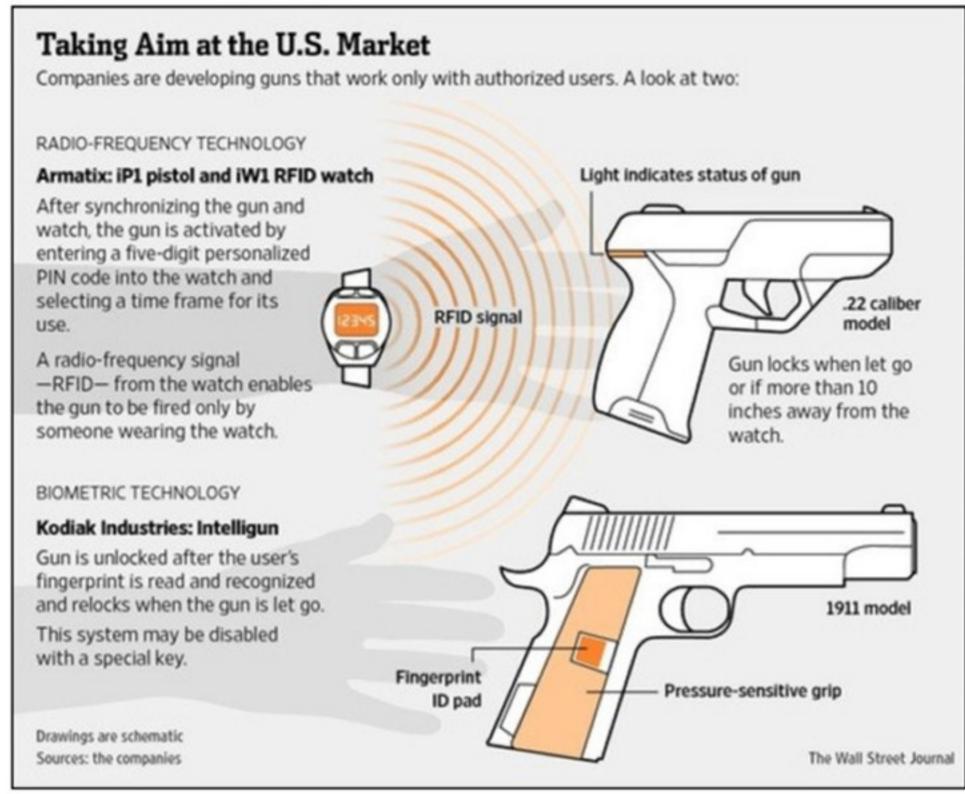

As you can see to the right, the watch has to be synchronized with the gun, a pin code has to be entered and the user must select a time frame for use.

That's confusing.

Unless the firearm is being used by an on-duty police officer, how would you be able to determine a time frame for its use?

Here's the part that really had me puzzled...gun control advocates are really behind this weapon. They feel that it's a step toward reducing gun violence, suicides and accidental shootings. Some have even went as far as to liken the RFID chip to the air bag on automobiles.

Then there is the other side...

Gun rights advocates are wondering what will happen if the technology fails or if an intruder breaks in during a time when the firearm isn't "scheduled" for use...my thoughts exactly.

Lawmakers in New Jersey and California have already jumped on board, passing legislation that would require that only smart guns be sold in the state within three years of it's availability.

That's where they lost the NRA!

The NRA looks at the smart gun as just another opportunity for the nasty 'ol government to stick their dirty hands into the gun industry.

Though the NRA refused an official comment on the smart guns the group opposes "government mandates that require the use of expensive, unreliable features, such as grips that would read your fingerprints before the gun will fire." This is according to their lobbyist. - Washington Post

The whole idea of a smart gun has become a hot ticket item among manufacturers and investors.

Ron Conway, early investor in Google and Facebook, has offered a $1 million prize to for new smart gun technology.

TriggerSmart has also manufactured a RIFD firearm that uses a ring instead of a watch.

Kodiak Arms, a Utah company, is already taking orders for it's Intelligun that utilizes fingerprints to unlock the weapon.

The Violence Policy Center has taken an entirely different position stating that the new technology will have little if no impact on gun violence.

I have to say that I agree with them.

- Every day in the U.S., an average of 289 people are shot. Eighty-six of them die: 30 are murdered, 53 kill themselves, two die accidentally, and one is shot in a police intervention.
- One person is killed by a firearm every 17 minutes, 87 people are killed during an average day, and 609 are killed every week. (source: CDC)
- Handguns comprised 72.5 percent of the firearms used in murder and non-negligent manslaughter incidents in 2011; 4.1 percent were with shotguns; 3.8 percent were with rifles; 18.5 percent were with unspecified firearms.
- Nearly three times more kids (15,576) were injured by firearms in 2010 than the number of U.S. soldiers (5,247) wounded in action that year in the war in Afghanistan (source: CDF, CDC, Department of Defense)
- Half of all juveniles murdered in 2010 were killed with a firearm (source: Office of Juvenile Justice & Delinquency Prevention)

PROS

There are several pros that I can think of...

- The Smart Gun could potentially decrease the number of children that accidently shoot themselves or others.
- It could potentially prevent being shot or killed by an unarmed intruder (if there is such a thing) that discovers a gun in the home.
- It could also potentially decrease the number of individuals shot or killed at the hands of a loved one with their own gun.
- The Smart Gun could impact the number of suicides.

CONS

- The timer on the gun could put the user in danger in the event there is an intruder or they are in a situation where they need to react quickly.
- Having a firearm that relies on anything but a finger to pull the trigger could be dangerous what if you can't find the watch. A ring makes a little more sense because it's unlikely that you will remove it to go to bed. How many people sleep with a watch on?
- What type of battery does this thing run on? Is it solar powered? What if the battery goes dead?
- What happens if you forget your PIN number?
- But the biggest con of all...

Is the product itself!

Let's start with the price!

The cost of Amatrix's .22 caliber pistol is $1,399 and that doesn't include the watch! The watch is $399. The cost of the average .40 caliber Glock handgun is $600.

In fact, why are we even talking about this?

The Smart Gun is a toy for gun collectors.

The Smart Gun is the equivalent of Google glasses, PlayStation 4 and the smart television.

The fact that there are legislative bodies like those in New Jersey and California that are passing laws to only sell smart guns is nothing more than a blessing for the manufacturers that create them.

Are they planning to remove or ban all the other firearms that were previously purchased in their state?

What are they going to do about semi-auto and automatic weapons? Are they planning to discontinue those sales without backlash from the NRA and gun loving citizens?

I think not!

Honestly, I believe that if there were NO OTHER OPTIONS then the Smart Gun might be a good idea.

The price alone could be a deterrent to your average criminal.

The problem here is that NOTHING is being done to eliminate the other options.

And yet for whatever reason, here we are - being convinced that a "smarter" gun will somehow impact ANYTHING!

We really can't afford to be that confused or easily misled, especially when it comes to firearms in the most violent country in the world.

Guns don't kill people, it's the people with guns that kill people. It's the people using guns that need to be smarter not the gun!

Anti Porn Crusader Shelley
Lubben - Did the Devil Make Her Do it?

The adult film biz is endlessly fascinating, not just for the obvious reasons - those outrageously hot babes and guys! But because there's so many raging controversies in its ranks - free speech issues, health issues, political and personal rivalries and the list goes on. One of the most controversial scenarios arises when certain adult performers leave or retire from the business and suddenly decide that it's their personal mission in life to stamp out the "evil" porn industry. They find God or follow a different path.

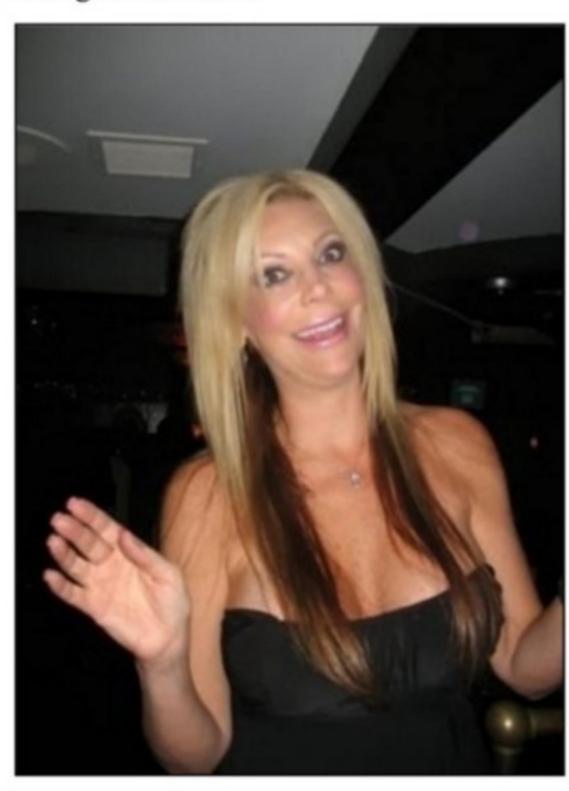

Hey, I'm all for personal choice and people following their dreams, whatever those may be. For me, it's always been a central tenet to fight for people's rights - to live as they want and stay true to their their deepest beliefs. It's their personal right to leave the adult business if they want to. No one is forcing them to stay. But when ex-performers arrogantly decide that they have the right to shut down or censor the adult business by launching religious or political crusades, then it becomes a different matter. Shelley Lubben is one of those ex-performers who has made it her (highly lucrative) business to smear the adult industry. In 2007, .Lubben and her husband founded an organization called The Pink Cross Foundation, a Christian outreach "ministry" which ostensibly rescues victimized adult performers from the evils of the porn business. Ms. Lubben has aggressively propelled herself into the public policymaking arena as an extremely high profile media spokesperson, referring to herself as "Dr. Lubben" (with a supposed degree in theology from a non-accredited diploma mill.) She sure ain't a doctor of theology or anything else.

Over the past few years, she's been a sought-after national and international speaker, counselor and political lobbyist against the adult industry. She's provided testimony in front of city councils and various influential health and safety task forces about the porn industry, and unfortunately for the American public, her self-serving, self-promotional agenda has swayed high-ranking officials who are more than happy to use her as their anti-porn "poster girl".

When I first heard of Shelley Lubben, I knew very little about her. Who was she? What were her motives? I occasionally saw a few clips of her on Hollywood Blvd. handing out Pink Cross brochures to street kids, and at first, I thought maybe she was doing some good in the community, or at least no harm. It took some digging to sort it all out and filter fact from fiction. Her story in a nutshell: she claims that during her time as a pornstar under the stage name "Roxy" (1993-1994, yes, all of ONE year) she suffered severe health damage, catching genital herpes and HPV (human papilloma virus), and cervical cancer requiring the removal of half of her cervix. But if you look closely at her real story, these claims become highly questionable. As they say, there's always two sides to every story, and in the case of Shelley Lubben, there seems to be 10 or 15 or 20 sides which constantly change and evolve depending on her mood.

Shelley showing cleavage for Christ!

By her own open admission, she spent over eight years as a prostitute working the streets of Los Angeles from ages 18 to 26. She entered the adult film industry at age 24, which means she was working as a prostitute at the same time. She was in the porn business for about 1-2 years and made approximately 17 films during that time, depending on which database you reference. So, she spent six years sexually "servicing" hundreds of men for pay BEFORE she ever set foot on an adult film set at age 24. She was also a drug addict and alcoholic and became became pregnant three times by "tricks", having a child by one of them. But according to her, a brief stint in the porn industry is to blame for all her mental and physical disasters.

When she's asked how that brief time in porn was responsible for her reproductive health problems, her response is that she used condoms as a prostitute, but not as a porn performer, since condoms were not required on adult film sets. Apparently, she expects people to believe that during six years working the gritty streets of Los Angeles as a hooker, condoms were always used. Seriously? She, herself, openly reveals several instances where guys refused to wear condoms. And obviously, getting pregnant by a client is proof that she didn't always use condoms. How stupid and gullible does she think people are to believe her ridiculous assertion that she "always" used condoms as a prostitute?

She can't keep her multitudes of stories straight.

In her rabid attacks against the adult industry today, she always conveniently omits the fact that performers working in the U.S. are legally required to be tested monthly for a range of STD's including herpes, AIDS, and syphilis, unlike prostitutes who are under no such requirement except in legal brothels in Nevada. With such a testing regimen in place, anyone with a modicum of logic can see that performers in the adult industry today are SAFER and healthier in terms of their STD status than the average American out there in the dating world, picking up random partners for one night stands, and they're absolutely healthier than untested street prostitutes such as she was. . It's true that in 1993 when she was on sets, the stringent testing procedures were not in use. But testing is mandatory today, and she has the ethical obligation to acknowledge this fact when she dishonestly paints the adult business as a rampant, disease-spreading threat to humanity and public health. But ethics aren't her strong point, so the lies and half-truths continue to spew. .

Her lie that pornstars are walking petrie dishes of disease is what helped pass Measure B - the "mandatory condom" law in Los Angeles County in 2013. The masses of uninformed voters in Los Angeles unfortunately voted "yes" because a poser like Shelley Lubben was allowed to interject her biased personal agenda into the debate. She has no professional credentials in medicine or public health, yet she's been permitted by "higher ups" to present herself to the public as some sort of all-knowing authority. She's even spoken at Cambridge University. Seriously? Just shows easy it is to be a scammer.

Shelley "evangelizing" against porn

The unconstitutional and unenforceable Measure B is now wending its way through the courts. I've covered this in two of my columns here at Top Floor and will continue to follow up. I believe in educating people with facts so that people can make up their own minds.

When I looked at the titles of several of Shelley Lubben's films, I counted five that were girl/girl. Considering how few films she made during her brief time in the industry - that means five out of the 17 didn't even involve male penetration and would certainly be classified as being in the "softcore" category. She's fond of describing the adult industry as the "porn slave trade". The last time I looked, people in the U.S. aren't forcibly captured off the streets and forced to work in adult movies.

Quite the opposite - thousands of chicks and guys on a daily basis practically beat down the doors of producers and directors looking for fame, screen time, any way into the entertainment business. As someone who started a website for a pornstar, I can personally say that a lot of the email coming to the site consists of men and women asking for advice and tips on how they can get into the business. They send photos, phone numbers, etc; - certainly no need to be kidnapped or enslaved! Using phrases such as "porn slave trade" seriously erodes whatever minimal credibility Ms. Lubben has.

In researching this article, I was lucky to view an excellent, hard-hitting investigational documentary, "The Devil And Shelley Lubben". It's produced by filmmaker/attorney/activist Michael Whiteacre and retired pornstar/activist Lydia Lee (aka Julie Meadows).

Parts 1-4 are currently posted on Youtube, with Parts 5-6 currently in production and soon to be completed. I must say, I was utterly fascinated and riveted by the extremely meticulous fact-finding of Whiteacre and Lee regarding Shelley Lubben's personal history, her mental health problems, her twisting of the truth, and the way she and her husband have profited at the expense of people who make their living as adult performers. It's a profound eye-opener, and regardless of which side of the spectrum you're on regarding porn, it's obvious that a tremendous amount of work went in to the production. It contains facts which Ms. Lubben, as far as I can determine, has not disputed. She's made no effort to openly debate Mr. Whiteacre or Ms. Lee.

If the material in "The Devil And Shelley Lubben" were false, she would have sued them, but as the saying goes, "you can't sue if it's true." It's done in a clear, concise manner that leaves no stone unturned and I applaud them for their efforts. This documentary should win an award and I hope it does!

Instead of being a grown up and pointing the finger where it clearly belongs - at herself - for a lifetime of poor judgments and mind-blowingly crappy choices, Shelley Lubben shifts the blame to an entire industry as her scapegoat. And it's ludicrously easy to use her own words against her. . With comical frequency (if would be oddly funny if it weren't so awful), whenever she opens her mouth, a half-truth or an easily disputed lie flies out and lands....SPLAT....right in her own face. The question in my mind is why she or the Pink Cross Foundation were ever given an iota of credibility in the halls of power or why she goes unchallenged so often. I think she's met her match in Michael Whiteacre, with his finely honed legal/debate skills. This documentary has scored big time with its scathing and unflinching look at her life. . OUCH!

She's made so many ridiculous claims about her (brief) time in the adult industry, even asserting that she was raped on a porn set. The stumbling block that she can't avoid, no matter how many ways she spins it, is that she willingly, consensually, as an adult, sought out employment in the adult world, performed sex on camera willingly, and was not forced to seek this employment. She cashed the check, baby. She signed the waiver and did the deed. A male performer who shot scenes with her at the time remembered her as a consensual, sober, and aggressive participant. He was shocked to hear her claim, 16 or 17 years later, that she'd been raped or abused on set in any way. During those years, he invited her to his home for an industry party which she attended and continued to actively "network", looking for more work. Certainly not the actions of someone who felt terrorized or fearful. As always, Ms. Lubben indulges in outrageous revisionist history about her time in the adult world for her personal profit and agenda today.

Shelley Lubben speaks to audiences and groups who are totally naive about the business, and without doubt, this suits her just fine. She can easily say anything to people who already have their minds made up about what goes on in the porn world. The industry in reality is quite small, and word gets around fast if there's anything going on that shouldn't, whether it's drugs or violence or STD's. The industry has enough stigma to deal with - they don't need to draw attention to themselves by doing the sort of things she claims routinely happen.

She also loves to claim that "everyone" in porn is "mentally ill" I think that comment is a case of "pot kettle black". She promotes the stereotype that people who go into adult are drug addicts, runaways and desperate mental cases. These inflammatory portrayals and blanket accusations against "all" people in adult is just another of her techniques to smear.

Are there people in porn with mental issues? Yes.

Are there lawyers and doctors and secretaries and preachers and teachers with mental issues? Yes.

And let's not forget the tons of "mainstream" actors in Hollywood who do insane stuff, yet no one advocates banning the acting profession because a percentage of actors do crazy or illegal things "off set".

There's no industry or profession under the sun that doesn't contain some people with mental issues, yet no one says that those industries should be banned, censored or wiped off the face of the earth. I would venture to guess that there's LESS mental illness among sex workers due to the fact that most of them truly enjoy what they do, they are comfortable with their own sexuality, and they know they're under constant scrutiny.

They're fully aware that society views them in a negative light, and yet they stand up for doing what they personally enjoy - portraying sexual fantasies on camera for their own enjoyment and that of their audience.

Let me make clear: I respect Ms. Lubben's right to express her religious and philosophical views about the porn industry. If she feels it's morally wrong in the sight of God to portray sex acts on screen for money, she has every right to speak her mind and say so. What she doesn't have a right to do is actively mislead people, to lie, to provide half the story, to spin her own back story, or harm the livelihoods and career CHOICES of other people by denouncing them and destroying their ability to earn a paycheck. She shows up at porn conventions to "warn" fans of the dangers of porn. If she hates it so much, why doesn't she stay away from it? She can't stay away because her Pink Cross is a business, it's the way she pays her bills and the mortgage on her house, as a speaker, "activist", "consultant", and "evangelist". She doesn't do it for free. Money motivates Shelley Lubben. I highly doubt she'd be out there with her expensively highlighted blonde hair (and believe me, I know how much THAT shit costs!), doing her crusader routine, if it weren't lucrative for her.

After watching Michael Whiteacre and Lydia Lee's documentary and doing my own research into the mater, the most important message I take away is this: we all need to own our decisions in life. . If you turned right when should have turned left or you chose the wrong job or hang out with destructive, criminal friends, or you went into porn. Guess what? You have to own it. Owning it is the one thing Shelley Lubben is incapable of doing. . The devil didn't make her do it. She chose to go into prostitution at 18. She chose to go into the adult business at 24.

Recently, the road has gotten rougher for Ms. Lubben. She's lost supporters in a number of key areas. Certainly, "The Devil In Shelley Lubben" isn't helping her agenda, but as they say, "the truth will set you free" and that, to me, is the best and truest Christian message of all.

Award-winning photographer Jack Watson has crafted a unique book dedicated to female glamour images created in black and white to honor the famous Hollywood stills photographers of the 1920's and 30's. With the help of a large collection of stunning glamour models who have been featured globally in many print, web, and video media including Playboy Enterprises TM, Watson shows you how he creates sensuous, seductive glamour black and white images out of virtually any color glamour photograph. Dispelling the myth that not all color images make good black and white images, this book illustrates how virtually any glamour photo to create the look of the Hollywood masters.

Jack Watson's Complete Guide to Creating Black and White Female Glamour Images includes a CD with every photo in the book. All of the black and white photos started out as color digital files. They have been provided in their original color form for your unrestricted noncommercial use. This book is for those who have some basic Photoshop skills and want to broaden their horizons and experiment with additional plug-ins and software such as Nik Color Efex Pro Complete, Nik Silver Efex Pro, Topaz Adjust, and Topaz BW Effects. It's also for anyone who just loves looking at beautiful black and white female glamour images.

While most of the images in the book are "sexy" in nature, a number of examples show how sexy is not always the naked truth, but quite the contrary. Clothed or nude, the female form is a thing of beauty. At the very least, this book will make you rethink what is truly glamorous. Creating black and white glamour photos will help you see with your brain and feel with your heart. Remember it's not what you see in a photograph that moves you; it's what you don't see. So, boot up your computer, open your favorite photo software, and put the CD in the drive, and create some magic.
